Most common interview mistakes

A job interview is a nerve-racking experience at the best of times, so it's important to prepare for it well. Arriving late is sure to ruin your chances, as is dressing inappropriately. And do not dream of answering your phone during the interview. Read on for five more common blunders and how to avoid making them.

1 ____ This is a highly unprofessional habit, as it suggests a serious inability to manage your time. Surely you could have planned your schedule better to include a coffee stop beforehand? Having a cup in your hand creates the opportunity for distraction: you might fiddle with it or miss a question while taking a sip of coffee. Worse still, its contents may end up on the desk, which will result in the interviewer remembering you for all the wrong reasons.

2 ____ In this age of technology, it is inexcusable not to know anything about your prospective employer. Most company websites these days have an "About Us" section giving company history, locations, divisions, and a mission statement. Do some research before the Big Day and you won't be stumped if the interviewer asks you a question about the place where you, theoretically, want to work.

3 ____ An interview is a professional situation, not a personal one, so the interviewer will not want to hear your life story. While you need to answer all the questions you are asked, your responses should be focused and to the point. Don't get side-tracked and talk about your home life, your partner, and any children you may have – save this for the first day on your new job when you are getting to know your colleagues.

4 ____ It is important to maintain a positive attitude throughout the interview, even when discussing things that have gone wrong. Don't let the interviewer know that you want to leave your current job because you can't stand your boss. Saying unpleasant things about your colleagues is not a good idea, because the interviewer might know them. Also, you will be showing him how you will speak about his company if you leave on bad terms in the future.

5 ____ Not being familiar with your past history of employment creates a very bad impression. It suggests that either you have a very bad memory, or you made up some of the facts. Make sure you know the basic information by heart because the interviewer is sure to ask you about it. If you really do have a bad memory, take a copy to refer to, but do not appear to be reading it out loud.

INDIA

The dream destination for astrology addicts

While in the US the general belief in astrology is limited to glancing at horoscopes in newspapers and magazines, in India people take their star signs very seriously indeed.

Astrology programs are shown on many of India's 320 television channels, and at least a dozen stations are devoted entirely to astrology 24 hours a day. Kolkata housewife Lata Banerji always starts her day by turning on the astrology channel, Shristi, to find out what the day holds for her and whether she will have to face any kind of domestic crisis. She also receives information on what food she should eat to avoid illness. "It gives me the confidence I need to face the day," she says. "Americans go to a therapist every week to cope with life. I get my sense of well-being from the advice I get from astrologers."

Astrology is important in India in all walks of life, but especially when it comes to choosing a marriage partner. Some astrological combinations are considered unfavorable, for example when the planet Mars is in a certain position on a person's birth chart. In this case, people believe that the couple will not get along and that their marriage will end badly. The only way around this is for the person with the unlucky combination to "marry" something symbolic before their real wedding. This is exactly what Bollywood actress and former Miss World, Aishwarya Rai did some years ago when she "married" a banana tree in the hope of avoiding problems in her marriage with the actor Abhishek Bachchan.

Yet, it is not only in the field of love that Indians seek astrological advice. There are some programs on TV that specialize in medical astrology, with callers asking about health issues. Others provide investment and business advice. Astrology is even important in politics with prime ministers asking their astrologers for a "promising" date before announcing a general election.

Nowadays it is almost obligatory for Indian parents to have a horoscope drawn up when a baby is born. Two people taking advantage of the boom in business are Kalidas Sriram and Vishi Babu, who have put up their tents complete with laptop computer and printer, right outside Kolkata's main hospital. They either visit the maternity wards or wait outside until new parents leave to offer their services. For the equivalent of $4, they use the baby's time and date of birth to print out a horoscope for the happy parents.

Many Indians have no doubt that astrology can change people's lives for the better. The glamorous Sunita Menon, India's most famous fortune-teller, was an air hostess until a tarot reader predicted that she would change jobs. Now she is the host of a hugely popular television program and was recently hired by India's most famous music company to give advice about investment and business decisions.

The wrong man for the job!

Mix up at BBC leads to job applicant appearing on live TV.

All sorts of things can go wrong in a job interview, ranging from spilling a drink to your cell phone ringing – the list is endless. Few applicants, however, turn up for their interview and end up appearing live on television. This is exactly what happened to 43-year-old Guy Goma when he went to a job interview at the BBC.

Mr. Goma, from the Republic of the Congo, had applied for the position of data support cleanser, a job that involves updating records on a database. On the day of the interview, he arrived at BBC Television Center in plenty of time and was told to wait in the main reception area until he was called.

At the same time, News 24 host Karen Bowerman was preparing to interview British technology expert Guy Kewney about the verdict of the Apple versus Apple court case. This was a high-profile case between Apple Computer and The Beatles' record label Apple Corps over the rights to use the name "Apple." Mr. Kewney was waiting for his TV appearance in another reception area. The mix-up occurred when a producer went to get the technology expert from the wrong reception area.

The producer approached Mr. Goma and asked him if he was Guy. Hearing his first name, Mr. Goma said that he was and he was taken to the News 24 studio. After having makeup put on, he was seated in front of the cameras and wired with a microphone. Although Mr. Goma thought all the preparations very unusual, he prepared to do his best for what he believed would be his job interview.

A few moments later, Ms. Bowerman introduced Mr. Goma on live television as technology expert Guy Kewney. At first, Mr. Goma became visibly shocked, but then he simply played along because he did not want to make a scene. He did his best to answer three questions about the verdict of the court case and its implications for the music industry. Meanwhile, Mr. Kewney, still in the waiting area and looking up at a TV screen, was astonished to see Mr. Goma being interviewed in his place.

As soon as the mistake was realized, the BBC recorded an interview with Mr. Kewney for later broadcast, but it was never shown. Twenty minutes after appearing live on TV, Mr. Goma attended his real job interview, which lasted for just ten minutes, but he did not get the job. A spokesperson for the BBC said that they were looking carefully at their guest procedures and that they would take every measure to ensure that the misunderstanding didn't happen again. Mr. Goma became a minor celebrity for a while, and he appeared on several TV shows.

Medical myths

Good doctors are always learning new things, but very few of them question existing medical myths. A well-known medical journal recently examined the most common of these to see if there is any evidence that they are true. This is what they discovered.

Myth: We only use about 10% of our brains

This myth appeared in the early twentieth century, when the concept of self-improvement was born. The idea was that there are many abilities built into our brains, but if we do not develop them, we never learn how to do them. This led to the belief that there are parts of our brains that we do not use. However, scientific evidence shows that this is not the case. Brain scans have revealed that there is no area of the brain that is silent or inactive. ¹____ Nobody who has examined the brain has been able to identify the 90% that we, supposedly, do not use.

Myth: Shaving hair causes it to grow back thicker

This belief is often reinforced by the media, despite the fact that a clinical trial in 1928 showed that shaving has no effect on hair growth. ²____ This makes it unlikely for the hair to grow back any different than it was before. The reason it appears thicker is that recently shaved hair lacks the finer point seen at the ends of unshaven hair. In addition to this, the new hair has not been lightened by the sun, which makes it look darker than the hair that has already grown.

Myth: Reading in insufficient light ruins your eyesight

People tend to believe this because of the discomfort they experience when they have been reading for a while in dim light. ³____ This causes our eyes to dry out and feel uncomfortable. Fortunately, the effect is only temporary and most ophthalmologists* agree that it doesn't damage our eyes permanently. Something else that disproves the myth is that there are more short-sighted people today than in the past, when reading conditions were worse. Before the invention of electricity, people relied on candles or lanterns to read, yet fewer people needed glasses.

*ophthalmologists – doctors who specialize in eyes

Myth: Eating turkey makes people feel especially tired

Some foods contain a natural chemical called tryptophan, which is known to cause drowsiness. The myth is the idea that consuming turkey (and the tryptophan it contains) might make someone more likely to fall asleep. Actually, both chicken and ground beef have nearly the same amount of tryptophan as turkey; other foods, such as pork or cheese, contain even more. The truth is that any large, solid meal can make you feel sleepy, whether it contains turkey or not. ⁴____ It isn't the turkey in your dinner that puts you to sleep; it is the quantity of food that you have eaten.

- 3 care a lot about current affairs. _____
- 4 love listening to music. _____
- 5 eat in fast food restaurants. _____

How to be a Hipster

Today, hipsters can be seen more frequently than ever before. They are part of a subculture that rejects everything mainstream in favor of expressing their own uniqueness. If this sort of thing appeals to you, you might like to consider becoming a hipster yourself. Read on to find out more.

1 Dress like a hipster

Hipsters would never wear designer clothes because they prefer to create their own image. Indispensable items in a hipster's wardrobe include skinny jeans or leggings and T-shirts with ironic messages printed on them. Plaid and flower patterns are also popular, and it doesn't matter if the garments don't match. They wear cowboy boots or Converse sneakers on their feet, and as far as accessories are concerned, they wear sunglasses, bright belts, and they generally have a couple of piercings.

2 Shopping

Consumerism is something that hipsters can't stand, so they don't go shopping very often. Instead they prefer to make use of old things, and they love vintage clothing. Female hipsters raid their grandmothers' closets looking for old dresses, while the men go in search of Grandpa's old shirts – the ones without a collar. Of course, the clothes generally need to be altered to make them fit, but a hipster is a genius with a needle and thread, so this isn't a problem. The only stores a hipster will enter are thrift shops, craft stores, or their local vintage boutique.

3 Lifestyle

Hipsters tend to be very bothered and upset about the way the world works – or doesn't work, in their view. They are usually well-informed because they spend hours every day sitting in cafés surfing the Internet on their smartphones or tablets – the only exceptions to their aversion to consumerism. Hipsters are usually young – the age ranges from late teens to mid-30s. Most go to college, and many of them base their career choices around music, art, or fashion.

4 Entertainment

Hipsters love all things independent and Indie music is a big part of what they represent. They are always the first to hear about new bands, but once a band becomes popular, they stop listening to it. A typical hipster line is: "I liked them before they were cool." When it comes to movies, they watch independent and foreign films, and they attend independent productions at the theater. Hipsters also love reading, especially books about political science, anthropology, and sociology.

5 Food

Eating meat isn't popular with hipsters, and most of them tend to be vegetarians or vegans. Many grow their own food in their gardens or on a balcony; if not, they go to natural food markets instead. Fruit, coffee, and Asian food are very popular with hipsters, and they love making meals for their foodie friends.

So if you want to be a hipster, forget everything you know about being "cool" and find your own unique way to fit in with this trend.

 - 5 arranged to be done at a particular time _____
 - 6 a period of time worked by a group of workers who start work as another group finishes _____
 - 7 get off an aircraft _____

Why are we waiting?

The usual excuses for flight delays are bad weather, strikes, or technical faults, but sometimes problems are caused by more unexpected events. Below are some of the most unusual reasons for flight disruptions at the world's airports.

Where's the pilot?

In November 2011, an Air India flight had to be canceled in southern India because there was no one to fly the plane. ¹ ____ The pilot who was supposed to fly the plane refused to do so because he had already completed his shift. The airline called someone to substitute for him, but the second pilot did not turn up. In the end, half of the passengers took a different Air India flight and the rest had to travel on a different airline.

Love is in the air

Last year, services were disrupted at New York's JFK Airport by a group of lovesick turtles. It seems that the turtles wanted to get from the area where they had been feeding to their breeding grounds, so they had no other option but to cross the runway. ² ____ Airport authorities say that this is not the first time that flights have been delayed by the turtles, but they can never predict exactly when the crossing will take place.

Passenger protest

In November 2010, Ryanair's flight schedule was interrupted by a protest by the people on board. Most of them were French tourists who had been on vacation in Morocco. The flight had already been delayed for three hours before it left Fez, Morocco, and so everyone was looking forward to arriving at Paris's Beauvais Airport. ³ ____ When the plane landed, about 100 passengers demanded to be flown to Paris and refused to disembark. About four hours later, they were finally persuaded to leave the plane and board the buses that would take them to Paris.

The great escape

In December 2009, a Continental Airlines flight was delayed in Houston, in the US, because two animals had gotten out of their box in the hold. The animals were sea otters, a marine mammal with dense fur that lives in the northern and eastern parts of the Pacific Ocean. ⁴ ____ Passengers had to wait 80 minutes for the sea otters to be caught before their plane could take off. Their flight was scheduled to leave for Columbus, Ohio, at 7:55 p.m., but they did not take off until 9:15 p.m.

How do writers write?

All writers have their own particular ways of getting words down – a favorite pen, a special place, even a certain time of day. Four famous writers reveal their secrets.

Michael Morpurgo

British children's author

I had problems some years ago sitting at a desk because I got pains in my wrist and shoulder, so I decided to copy my writing hero Robert Louis Stevenson instead and found his way worked. Now, when I have a story in my head I go to bed with a small notebook, like the one children are given in elementary school, and fill it up. I keep my manuscripts in the refrigerator just in case the house burns down.

Suzanne Collins

American screenwriter and novelist

I grab some cereal and sit down to work as soon as possible. The more distractions I have to deal with before I actually begin writing, the harder focusing on the story becomes. Then I work until I'm tapped out*, usually sometime in the early afternoon. If I actually write three to five hours, that's a productive day. Some days all I do is stare at the wall. That can be productive, too, if you're working out character and plot problems. The rest of the time, I walk around with the story slipping in and out of my thoughts.

* tapped out – tired, exhausted

Haruki Murakami

Japanese author and translator

When I'm in the process of writing a novel, I get up at 4:00 a.m. and work for five to six hours. In the afternoon, I run for 6 miles or swim for 1 mile (or do both); then I read a bit and listen to some music. I go to bed at 9:00 p.m. I keep to this routine every day without variation. The repetition itself becomes the important thing; it's a form of hypnotism and it helps me reach a deeper state of mind.

Philip Pullman

British author

I sit down to write by hand, in ballpoint, on A4 narrow lined paper, after breakfast, and work through till lunch with a break for coffee and reading mail. Then I have lunch and watch *Neighbours (invaluable). In the afternoon I read or take the dog for a walk or do something physically constructive. In the evening I finish the three pages, which is my daily task, or if I finished them in the morning, I do whatever journalism or reviewing or lecture-planning I have in hand.

* Neighbours – an Australian soap opera

Kids, teens, and e-books

Are young people embracing the new technology?

Publishers are closely monitoring the sales of printed books and e-books these days in order to adapt to an ever-changing market. Bearing in mind that today's children will be the consumers of the future, it is the under-18s that interest them most. Market research is carried out in this age group on a regular basis and new data suggests that this segment faces some very special challenges.

The first survey was conducted online among a thousand parents of children from the ages of zero to twelve. Disappointingly for digital booksellers, e-books still make up only 11 % of children's books. There are several reasons for this. First, a child needs to own a digital device to be able to read an e-book. The survey found that while 27 % of the kids of parents in the survey had their own computer and 25 % owned a smartphone, only 7 % currently possessed an e-reader. These figures are likely to increase in the future, however, as more children have access to a reading device. The parents in the survey said that they often share their digital devices with their kids and they are starting to hand them down when they upgrade to a newer model.

Another obstacle facing e-books in the children's market is the popularity of traditional bookstores. These are still the number one source of discovery for children's books and more than 85% of books are bought on impulse. Parents often prefer shopping in a bookstore because printed books are usually graded by age or level. They also make colorful presents for young children, while e-books lack the visual and tactile appeal. On the other hand, the research showed that the look and feel of a book becomes less important as children grow older. Seven- to twelve-year-olds say that e-books are "fun and cool" and they encourage them to read more, despite the fact that their parents would prefer them to read printed books.

The other segment that interests publishers is the young adult market. Teenagers today do most of their reading on smartphones and tablets, but this does not mean that they are in favor of e-books. A second online survey of a thousand 13- to 17-year-olds showed that teens are way behind all other age groups in e-book adoption. Sixty-six percent of young adults in the survey said that they prefer printed books to e-books, and only 8 % preferred e-books. The main reason for this resistance is that teenagers enjoy using technology as a social medium. Every day they read hundreds of short pieces about all kinds of different subjects and they share the most interesting with their friends. At this point, e-books cannot be shared or commented on and so they are not a social technology.

Surveys like these are of vital importance to publishers because they tell them about the latest trends in the market. In the case of the children's and young adult market, the two surveys have shown that printed books are still winning the race against e-books.

1 READING

a Read the article and choose the right answer.

How can Americans reduce their carbon footprints?

- A By taking only two or three long airplane trips a year.
- B By buying a lot of small products instead of a few big products.
- C By reducing taxes on food, housing, and transportation.
- D By spending less money on goods and services.

b Read the article again and choose a, b, or c.

1 The average American's carbon footprint is...

- a approximately eight times more than the global average carbon footprint per person.
- b approximately five times more than the global average carbon footprint per person.
- c approximately double the global average carbon footprint per person.

2 Americans with the lowest carbon footprints are usually ...

- a people who have nowhere to live or eat.
- b people who serve as soldiers.
- c people who are unemployed.

3 A person who lives a simple lifestyle in the US has a high carbon footprint because...

- a he or she can't pay a tax to offset his or her carbon footprint.
- b the CO₂ footprint calculation is not divided equally among all US citizens.
- c he or she has access to public services paid for by the government.

4 The "rebound effect" ...

- a has a negative impact on an individual's carbon footprint.
- b has a positive impact on an individual's carbon footprint.
- c has no impact on an individual's carbon footprint.

5 The writer's conclusion is that...

- a paying a carbon footprint tax is an easy solution.
- b finding a way to reduce the average US citizen's carbon footprint is more important than anything else to all Americans.
- c reducing the US carbon footprint is almost impossible.

Can We Make Our Carbon Footprints Smaller?

Our carbon footprint is the estimated amount of carbon dioxide (CO₂) given off as we go about our daily lives. While the global average carbon footprint is about 4 metric tons per person each year, Americans contribute approximately 20 metric tons of greenhouse gas per person each year. Compared to other countries, even those who use the least amount of energy in the US – for example, a person who lives off the grid – still contribute double the carbon emissions than the global average per person. And, not surprisingly, a person's carbon footprint increases in size as his or her income increases. So, the less you spend, the more environmentally friendly you are.

How is it possible that people in the US who live simple lifestyles, e.g., children or the homeless, make such large contributions to greenhouse gas emissions? The answer is simple: Each US citizen has access to various basic government services such as firefighting and police departments, road and bridge repair, libraries, jails and prisons, the military, etc. When these public services are divided equally among the entire US population, it significantly raises the carbon footprint per person. In fact, according to a study conducted by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the lowest carbon footprint that can be calculated for a person living in the US is 8.5 metric tons. And shockingly, this carbon footprint corresponds to a homeless person who sleeps in public shelters and eats in soup kitchens.

While it is admirable to make changes in lifestyle to reduce a carbon footprint, in reality, it is very difficult to do. The MIT study revealed that a "rebound effect" occurred when someone made an effort to reduce his or her carbon footprint. Take the example of a person who made the deliberate choice to buy a hybrid car instead of a large SUV to save money on gas costs. Very often that person would use the money he or she saved to do something else, e.g., take a long airplane trip. In this case, just one long airplane trip produces more CO₂ emissions than driving the large SUV for a year. This ends up having a negative impact on a person's carbon footprint by making it bigger!

Can Americans reduce their carbon footprints? According to the study, it IS possible, but it would require lifestyle changes such as giving up long-distance travel and buying fewer smartphones, tablets, and MP3 players that have large energy costs to produce and deliver. The most drastic way to lower the average American's US carbon footprint is to add a CO₂ tax on food, housing, and transportation, and most Americans don't want their taxes raised. Unless we can find a way to reduce our carbon footprints, the price we may ultimately have to pay is much higher than the amount Americans will ever have to pay in taxes.

1 READING

a Read the article and number the paragraphs in the correct order.

b Read the article again. Mark the sentences T (true) or F (false).

- 1 Most people think that boys take more risks than girls. T
- 2 In the past, men had to pay more than women to insure their cars. —
- 3 A third of the girls in the survey said that they replied to text messages while driving. —
- 4 In general, girls use cell phones when they are driving more than boys. —
- 5 The second survey involved both men and women. —
- 6 New mothers are the safest drivers of all. —
- 7 Women now have to pay higher insurance rates than men in some countries. —

c Look at the highlighted words and phrases in the text and try to figure out their meaning. Then use them to complete the sentences.

- 1 Some people have different personalities when they're _____ of a car.
- 2 I didn't _____ to your text message because my phone battery died.
- 3 The police arrested everyone who had been _____ in the fight.
- 4 The banks are raising interest _____ from 1.5 % to 2 %.
- 5 The cuts are _____ education. There will also be less money for health care.
- 6 An example of his _____ is when he drove on the freeway doing 110 miles per hour.
- 7 My parents _____ me in my choice of career.
- 8 Zane wears shorts all the time _____ how bad the weather is.

A What is more, cell phone use while driving is not confined to young women. A child protection group in the US recently did a survey of the habits of new mothers in the car. The results of this survey are similarly shocking. Of the 2,396 mothers who took part, 78 % admitted talking on the phone when they were driving with their babies in the car. Twenty-six percent said that they regularly texted or checked their emails. Not surprisingly, nearly 10 % of the mothers interviewed had been involved in a car crash. These results show that new mothers behave almost as badly on the road as teenagers.

B It is widely accepted that boys are bigger risk takers than girls. More men than women take part in risky sports and men are more likely to be responsible for reckless driving. Until now, this factor has been reflected in car insurance policies, which have always required men to pay higher rates than women. However, recent research has shown that this belief may no longer be correct.

C With statistics like these, it is hardly surprising that insurance companies are reconsidering the policies they offer. And they are being backed by some countries around the world. The European Court of Justice, for example, has recently passed a measure that prohibits insurance companies from taking gender into account when calculating the cost of an insurance policy. The change serves to make one thing very clear: a distracted driver is a dangerous driver, no matter what sex they are.

D A survey of 2,000 young drivers about the risks they take on the road revealed some surprising figures. More than a third of the girls who took part admitted that they regularly read text messages from friends and family members while driving. More than a quarter of these girls admitted answering the texts while they were behind the wheel. In contrast, the boys did not seem so concerned about who was trying to contact them. A much smaller number admitted to reading texts on the road, and only 10 percent said that they would try to respond to the message before stopping the car.

Night on a bare mountain

1 Sugarloaf Mountain, in the state of Maine in the US, is one of the best ski resorts in the country. Thousands of winter sports enthusiasts head for the area during weekends and holidays to enjoy the breathtaking scenery. Most of them go home exhausted but happy at the end of a great day of skiing. But not in the case of 17-year-old Nicholas Joy from Massachusetts.

2 Nicholas had gone skiing with his father at Sugarloaf. It was a Sunday, and they were on their way back down the mountain when Nicholas saw a shortcut. He decided to take the shortcut while his father continued down the official path. They arranged to meet back at the parking lot for the drive home. And that was the last his father saw him that day because Nicholas didn't turn up at the parking lot. After waiting for what he considered to be a reasonable time, Nicholas's worried father alerted the authorities. A massive search party was launched, but it soon began to snow heavily. Eventually, the search was called off.

3 Meanwhile, Nicholas was desperate. He had gotten hopelessly lost, and he realized that he was going to have to spend the night on the mountain. Fortunately, he is a big fan of survival shows so he knew how to make a snow cave. He found a safe place to build his cave and made a huge pile of snow with his skis. Then, he made a tunnel into the snow and dug out a hole to sit in. He covered the bottom with fallen pine branches and lay down inside. Whenever he was thirsty, he left the cave and drank water from a nearby stream. Then he returned to his cave and waited to be found.

4 Rescue came two days later in the form of snowmobiler Joseph Paul. Mr. Paul was riding along a trail about 4 miles from the resort when he spotted Nicholas's snow cave. He got off his snowmobile, inspected the cave, and found Nicholas curled up inside. After giving the hungry teenager some cheese crackers and peanuts, he took Nicholas back to the resort to be reunited with his relieved parents.

5 An official at Sugarloaf confirmed that two or three groups of skiers get lost on the mountain each year. Like Nicholas, they are usually found in areas that are out of bounds. However, few of the rescued skiers are in such good shape because they lack his knowledge of survival skills. Tragically, some of them do not make it through the night.

- a Read the article. Complete it with the missing sentences.
- A When journalist Kathryn Schulz was 29, she decided to get a tattoo
- B Since then, Ms. Schulz has found two ways of dealing with her regret
- C Apart from these four components, Ms. Schulz also felt pain
- D Despite not having the effect that she had intended, Ms. Schulz's tattoo has served to remind her of something else
- E Ms. Schulz experienced all four components of regret that night
- F Ms. Schulz's tattoo is a compass

- b Read the whole text again and mark the sentences T (true) or F (false).

- 1 Kathryn Schulz had had no regrets until she got a tattoo. T
- 2 The first emotion Ms. Schulz felt that night was a kind of confusion.

- 3 with a mistake which means that it is not perfect _____
- 4 happening at exactly the same time as something else _____
- 5 purposes or aims _____
- 6 thinking too much about one particular thing _____
- 7 the importance of something _____
- 8 accept something unpleasant or difficult _____
- 9 confusion and surprise _____
- 10 a basic general idea _____

Don't regret regrets

¹ A. Unfortunately, she regretted getting it as soon as she left the tattoo shop. Until then, she had been proud of leading a life without regrets. She had gone through life working on the principle that you should always look forward and never look back. But that night, she remembers feeling regret for the very first time.

² _____. The first one was denial and she spent the first few hours saying to herself, "Make it go away!" The second was a feeling of bewilderment in which she kept on asking herself, "How could I have done that?" The third was a desire to punish herself, something along the lines of "I could kick myself." The fourth is something that psychologists call perseveration. This is the habit of focussing obsessively and repeatedly on the exact same thing. A person who is feeling regret has the first three components going around in their head again and again.

³ ____; not only the physical pain of her tattooed wrist, but the emotional pain of knowing that she had done something incredibly stupid.

⁵ _____. Most people who see it are disappointed, because they don't think it is that bad; the problem is that she doesn't like it. She got the tattoo when she was traveling and she was worried that she would forget some of the lessons that she had learned during that time. It is a lesson that she wants to share with other people. For her, the compass represented the two ideas in one image.

⁶ _____. It reminds her how important it is to keep on exploring, and simultaneously how important it is to know where you're heading in life. Ms. Schulz believes that if we have goals and dreams and if we love people, we should feel pain when things go wrong. In her view, we need to learn to love the flawed things that we create and to be able to forgive ourselves for creating them. Ms. Schulz says that her experience has taught her that regret doesn't exist to remind us that we did badly; instead it is there to remind us that we know that we can do better.

San Francisco: Zero-Waste City

Each year, Americans throw away about 250 million tons of garbage. That's roughly 4 pounds per person per day, most of which ends up in a landfill site. ¹ ___ As well as being an eyesore, landfills create environmental damage and emit harmful greenhouse gases, which have been shown to contribute to climate change. These concerns have prompted San Francisco and a handful of other cities to aim for a once-unthinkable goal: zero waste.

In 2009, San Francisco became the first city in the country to require that residents and businesses alike separate from their trash biodegradable items, like food scraps, and recyclable goods, like paper, metals, and plastic, into separate bins. And that has led to a big reduction in the amount of garbage headed to the landfill. The city's new laws have helped to keep 80 % of its waste away from landfills, when the national average is 35 %. However, the city mayor, Ed Lee, wants to go even further. ² ___

San Francisco's 80-year-old private garbage company has recently invented a new name for itself: Recology. ³ ___ This can be used to make a substance called compost, which can be added to soil to help plants grow. So, Recology set about building a new composting facility on an enormous complex northeast of San Francisco. Here they turn all of the city's organic waste into rich compost that is used by some of the nation's best vineyards. In the rest of the country, where composting is a rarity, 97 % of food waste is disposed of in landfills.

Surprisingly, it isn't only food that residents are told to put into their compost bins; they are encouraged to put in all kinds of other garbage as well. This includes packaging where meat has been sold, food wrappings, paper napkins, tissues, used paper plates, and even milk cartons. In the right conditions, paper will biodegrade in two to four weeks. Compost bins provide these conditions because they are warm and moist. ⁴ ___ However, Ed Lee has found a solution to this problem, too: he has banned them from the city.

Not all San Franciscans are enthusiastic about Ed Lee's recycling policy because they say it is costing them more. Since last year, residents have had to pay for their recycling and compost bins, as well as their trash bins. ⁵ ___ Those who refuse to sort their garbage can face fines ranging from $100 to $1,000. Teams of workers from the city go around knocking on doors of residents who, without realizing it, have had their garbage cans inspected by auditors early in the morning. The idea is to educate people on composting and recycling and answer any questions they may have. So far, no fines have been imposed and only warnings have been given out. And city officials say that the more people know about zero waste, the more eager they are to support the policy.

The hidden dangers of rock music

Twenty-two years ago as I left the house to go to see Motörhead – known at the time as “the loudest band in the world” – my mother’s words followed me out of the door: “You’ll ruin your hearing one day!” At the time, I rolled my eyes dramatically, and proceeded to assault my ears with 140 decibels of noise, which I now know is ten decibels above the sound of a jet plane taking off. That night, I left the venue with my ears ringing and it took more than a week for the ringing to diminish. But after that, I thought no more of it.

That is, until I was in my mid-20s. I was working in a busy store with background noise from shoppers and music, and I started finding it difficult to hear what customers were saying. At home, my husband began to notice that I was either mishearing or not hearing things at all. On one occasion when we were at a noisy party, I had no idea what someone was saying to me, but I was nodding and smiling as if I understood. Afterward, my husband informed me that the person had been telling me that her dog had just died. Needless to say, I was extremely embarrassed. The result of this episode was that I went to see my GP to have my hearing checked.

The news was not good. I had hearing loss of 50 percent. It affected the top range of my hearing, which meant that any high-pitched noises, speech, phones, and day-to-day sounds were gone. I also had tinnitus, which was causing an infuriating ringing in my ears. The doctors explained that years of listening to loud music had caused the tiny sensory hair cells in the inner ear to become irreversibly flattened – meaning I would never hear properly again. And unless I protected my ears, my hearing would deteriorate even more.

So it turns out that my mother was right and I have, indeed, ruined my hearing. Today, I wear a pair of hearing aids that are very discreet but still definitely very uncool. But according to the World Health Organization, I am not alone. They say that around 26 million Americans risk serious damage to their ears by exposure to loud music. Hours spent listening to music on MP3 players and at concerts are to blame.

There are so many things that can be done to protect our hearing and it is often a case of “it’ll never happen to me” or thinking that “only old people go deaf.” However, in our modern life, where most people spend half their time plugged into a music device, it is very likely that it may, indeed, happen to you.

How to deal with a sleep-talking husband

Most women would find it infuriating to be woken up night after night by their husband talking in his sleep. But one woman has found an interesting way of dealing with the problem. ¹ ____ And then she posts them on the Internet.

Thirty-six-year-old Karen Slavick Lennard is a web-products manager, and she's married to Adam, an advertising account director, also thirty-six. They live together in southwestern London. Karen first entered Adam's lines onto her laptop by hand, but now she uses a voice-activated recorder. "I find every single thing Adam says hilarious," she says, "I cannot believe what he comes out with, and neither can he. We laugh like crazy every morning." ² ____ Then he suddenly stops.

Adam talks about everything and anything in his sleep; from vampire penguins to zombie guinea pigs. Examples of the things he has said in a typical week include, from Tuesday night: "Pork chops are the most satisfying. Mmmmmmm. Dangle them from the ceiling." ³ ____ And then on Sunday at 5 a.m., he mumbled:

2 READING

a Read the text quickly and answer the questions.

- 1 What is the problem with online arguments?
- 2 What does Professor Markman think is the solution?

Internet rage: a new trend?

Until now, people have usually conducted their arguments face-to-face. A disagreement occurs and each side wants to make his or her views known. But the Internet has changed all this. Today, more and more people are getting involved in arguments online.

Many of these take place in the comments section that follows below articles on news websites. The tone of some of the posts on these threads can be extremely aggressive. So why is everyone so angry on the Internet?

Art Markman, a professor of psychology at the University of Texas, has an explanation for this. First, he points out that the people who post these comments are anonymous. Nobody knows their real name or who they are, which means that they do not have to explain their actions. Second, the commenter and the person who is the target of their anger are not actually in the same room. The distance between them makes the commenter lose his inhibitions, and so he becomes more offensive. Third, it is much easier to be nasty in writing than in speech, according to Professor Markman.

Although Professor Markman believes in self-expression, he regards online arguments as a complete waste of time. He says that the whole point of an argument is to try to persuade someone else to agree with you. In order to do this, the people involved have to listen to each other. This sort of interaction is lacking on the Internet, says Professor Markman. Exchanges on comment threads do not happen in real time and so people have longer to focus on their opinion and write lengthy monologues to justify themselves. In the process, they become even more convinced that they are right, and they stop listening to other people. In the end, there is a complete absence of communication and the only thing they have achieved is to work themselves up into a rage.

So, what is the solution? Professor Markman does not think that comment threads should be banned, but he does think that controls should be stricter. In his view, it is the news outlets themselves who should be responsible for the content of the thread. "If, on a website, comments are left up that are making personal attacks in the nastiest way, you're sending the message that this is acceptable human behavior," he says. Professor Markman would like site administrators to remove the offending remarks from the comment thread. "Having a conversation with someone you don't agree with is a skill," he says. Unfortunately, it seems to be a skill that some commenters are not familiar with.

How to spot a liar

People tell us lies every single day. Some of these lies are white lies, told to protect our social dignity or to keep a secret that needs to be kept. But others are more dangerous and can cause serious problems. According to Pamela Meyer in her best-selling book Liespotters, most of us only realize that someone is lying to us 54 % of the time. In her book, Ms. Meyer explains the patterns used to recognize deception by liespotters like herself.

Ms. Meyer starts by disproving some of the myths about liars and their body language. For example, most people believe that liars tend to move around and fidget a lot when they are not telling the truth. In fact, people tend to freeze their upper bodies when they are lying, she says. Another misconception is that liars will not look a person in the eye. According to Ms. Meyer, they maintain eye contact a little too much because they have already heard about the myth. In general, liars are very good actors, but one thing that can give them away is their smile.

In her book, Ms. Meyer explains how it is possible to detect a fake smile. Smiling is a conscious action, she says, and anybody can do it just by contracting the muscles in their cheeks. The secret to a real smile lies in the eyes. We have some lines at the outer corner of our eyes called crow's feet, which appear when we give a genuine smile. It is impossible to consciously contract the muscles around the eyes to produce these lines. This means that a smile that doesn't reach the eyes is not real.

Further signs that give liars away, according to Ms. Meyer, are differences between their words and their actions. Someone who shakes their head when they are saying "yes" is lying, as is a person who shrugs their shoulders when they are trying to tell a convincing story. Facial expressions are another clue. Liars are experts at faking expressions for long periods of time in order to mask what they really feel. Often, the emotion they are trying to hide suddenly appears on their face for a second. Ms. Meyer identifies the worst of these emotions as contempt: a feeling that a person is without value. Contempt is shown by pulling one corner of the lips up and in.

Ms. Meyer warns us, however, that we shouldn't presume that somebody is lying just because we have seen one of the signs. But we should be suspicious when we see many of the signs together. When we spot that we're being lied to, our next job is to find out the truth, and that requires completely different skills.

THE MAKING OF Amadeus

The play Amadeus was written by the English playwright Peter Shaffer. He came up with the idea after reading extensively about the composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. In the course of his reading, he was struck by the contrast between the quality of Mozart's music, which was obviously the work of a genius, and the silliness of his letters written to his family and friends, which could have been written by an eight-year-old. The tone of the letters was often rather vulgar.

Once his play was complete, Shaffer had to decide on a director. The experienced director John Dexter had previously directed three of Shaffer's plays, so he was the obvious choice. However, the two had an argument about financial issues, so Shaffer had to find an alternative. During a conversation with Peter Hall, the director of the Royal National Theatre, Hall told Shaffer how much he longed to direct Amadeus. Having directed productions of most of Mozart's operas, Shaffer decided that he was the ideal person for the job.

Before his quarrel with Shaffer, Dexter had already cast Simon Callow, then a young unknown actor, as Mozart. In the period between directors, Callow had started having doubts about his role. He told Shaffer that he didn't think he was the right person to play the composer. Shaffer, however, trusted Dexter's judgment even though he had no idea then about Callow's talents. He reassured Callow, who eventually agreed to go ahead with the role.

Rehearsals for the play started badly. At first, when Callow said his lines, the cast got the giggles because the language was so childish and vulgar. But then, the playwright and director got the actors together to discuss the childishness behind Mozart's genius, and they began to understand what the play was trying to say. From then on, the actors were impatient for rehearsals to start each day. While they were rehearsing, Shaffer sat in a theater seat, rewriting some of the scenes. According to the playwright, rehearsals were a joy to watch and both director and actors now felt confident that the play would become a theater classic.

On the opening night, Peter Shaffer was criticized by some members of the audience for portraying Mozart as an imbecile. Others, however, praised the way in which the playwright had chosen to show both sides of the composer's personality. They realized that the vulgarity was meant to highlight Mozart's humanity in contrast to his genius. Despite the controversy, Amadeus was a great success, and it won the 1981 Tony Award for Best Play. The play was later adapted by Shaffer for the 1984 Academy Award-winning movie of the same name.

Top techniques in identity theft

Identity theft is the illegal use of somebody else's personal information in order to obtain money or credit. Victims of identity theft can face financial and even legal problems in the future because an impostor has used their personal information to purchase something or give false information to the authorities. The best way of preventing thieves from stealing your identity is to know how they operate. Here are some of the most common identity theft techniques.

A Phishing

You get an email that claims to be from a financial institution or other business asking for some personal information from you. It contains a link to a web page where you have to key in your bank username and password. The new page may look real but it is, in fact, a fake. Identity thieves will take all of the information you give on the page and use it to steal money from your accounts.

B Smishing

You get a text message that seems to require your immediate attention, for example: "[Name of bank] confirms that you have bought a computer from [Name of retailer]. Call [Phone Number] if you have not made this purchase." When you call the number, an automated voice response system asks you to confirm your credit card details. The text message is actually from a group of identity thieves who can create and use a duplicate bank card within 30 minutes of obtaining the necessary information.

C Vishing

This occurs when you receive a phone call on your landline from someone who seems to be trying to help you. The person claims to have detected fraudulent activity on your credit card and asks you to confirm your credit card details. The call is actually from an identity thief who wants to use your card to purchase things for himself.

D Spoofing

Hackers break into your computer and transfer communication from a legitimate website to a fake one. For example, when you try to log into Facebook, your computer will take you to the hacker's site, where they will steal your log-in information. From there, they will have access to plenty of details, such as your date of birth and the names of the members of your family. Later, they can use this information to steal your identity.

E Spyware

Spyware is a type of software used on the Internet to gather information about a person or organization without their consent. Identity thieves often attach it to downloadable files, such as online games. When you install the game, a hacker records all your keystrokes, including things like credit card numbers or bank account logins.

F Digging through your trash can

The trash can be a great source of personal information and in some cases, identity thieves actually go through the garbage to see what they can find. Make sure you completely destroy your old credit cards when it is time to dispose of them. As far as official documents are concerned, you should put them all through a shredder or burn them before you throw them out.

Journalism: the best job ever

Not everyone can handle a career in journalism – it can be stressful and the hours are long – but it's a fantastic, and popular, career choice. Here are eight reasons why.

1 _____

The first thing you do to start your working day is sit down and find out what's been happening in the world since you went to sleep the night before. Reading a dozen or so news outlets and blogs with your morning coffee is a better way to start the day than sitting in traffic in the rush hour!

2 _____

When you start writing a new story, you know nothing, or very little, about it. But by the time you hand your finished article to the editor, you're an expert on that story. You're constantly learning and getting smarter when you're a journalist.

3 _____

On a single day, you could be at your desk researching some new story. Or you might cover a press event with a photographer, or interview a contact for a developing story. From time to time you might even be asked to review a restaurant or cultural event. You never know what the day is going to bring.

4 _____

One of the highlights of the job is interviewing really interesting people you wouldn't usually have the chance to talk to: from "ordinary" people who have done something extraordinary, to sportspeople, artists, and musicians. And you don't have to worry about what you say to everyone you meet, either – if you ask a politician a question they don't like, you could get a pay raise.

5 _____

It's a big, fast world, and it's important to be where the news is happening, particularly with events that have a global significance like conflicts or protests. Not all journalists travel a lot, but many do. Situations change quickly these days and it's important to stay on top of the story.

6 _____

A newsroom is a fast-paced environment and a journalist works on a tight deadline, so there's always a certain adrenaline rush. If you are the type of person who works best under pressure, it's the best job ever.

7 _____

It's a great feeling to have your name on a published article, or to have something you've written quoted in another article. And when someone tells you that they've read your article and they like what you've written, that's even better.

8 _____

If you have an urge to write and you are curious about the world around you, a career in journalism is the obvious choice. The best journalists are the ones who really try to understand every aspect of a story, and then explain that story well. A good, well-written article can influence the way people think.

Ponzi schemes

Want to know an easy route onto the world's rich list? You may think it's an impossible dream, but as Charles Ponzi reveals, all you really need is a persuasive smile and the ability to lie very, very well.

The man behind the name

Charles Ponzi was an Italian immigrant living in the United States who cheated countless innocent people out of money in the 1920s. At that time, when a person wanted to send a letter to another country, he or she (if they were feeling generous) could also send the recipient an international reply coupon. The coupon could then be used to pay for the postage of the reply. Ponzi's idea was to buy cheap reply coupons in another country and sell them in the United States, where they were worth more. He then planned to share the profits with his investors. However, transporting and paying for the coupons caused delays and incurred extra costs, which meant he couldn't pay back his investors as quickly as he had promised. But he didn't tell them that. ¹ _____ Ponzi paid the early investors their profit with the new money that was pouring in, and kept some of it for himself. At the height of his success, he was buying and selling around 160 million reply coupons, despite only 27,000 existing worldwide. When people realized this, it was all over. ² _____

How does it work?

The Ponzi scheme is based on a simple principle revolving around paying old investors with money that comes in from new investors. What exactly they invest in doesn't matter. With the money from the first investors you rent a fancy office and buy a new car, which helps you to attract new investors. ³ _____. One person can only do so much, and sooner or later the scheme flops because there aren't enough new investors to pay all of the old ones.

Other big schemers

Examples of the Ponzi scheme date back as far as the 1880s, and are still happening now. One of the longest-running operations was headed by Lou Pearlman, former manager of the famous American boy bands Backstreet Boys and N*Sync. To fund promotional activity for his band roster, he convinced businesspeople to invest in other nonexistent side projects. ⁴ _____ Pearlman was eventually convicted of cheating investors of over $300 million and, in 2008, was sentenced to 25 years imprisonment.

But that was nothing compared to Bernard Madoff's $65 billion Ponzi scheme. In 2009 Madoff was sentenced to 150 years in prison after having cheated billionaires, celebrities, and even banks and charities. ⁵ _____ He was also helped by the fact that he was running a legitimate business at the same time. He didn't promise ridiculously high returns, and he always gave his investors their money when they asked for it. Madoff's business propositions seemed perfectly trustworthy, but a lot of people lost all their money.

So for Charles Ponzi, Lou Pearlman, Bernard Madoff, and countless other Ponzi schemers, their lies eventually caught up with them. Their riches were only temporary and the price they eventually had to pay was much more. Our advice? Never try to make an honest buck based on a lie. The truth always wins... eventually.

Shanghai

Shanghai, with a population of around 23.5 million, is currently the fifth of the world's megacities. Its location on the mouth of the Yangtze River Delta in eastern China makes it one of the busiest ports in the world. The Huang Pu River, a tributary of the Yangtze, separates the historic center of the city, the Puxi area, from the newly developed financial and commercial area called Pudong.

On their arrival in Shanghai, visitors are hit by an explosion of sights, sounds, and smells. Rents are high, and apartments tiny, so most residents prefer to hang out outside. The street is a place to eat, play, read, and relax, and it is not unusual to see people strolling around in their nightgowns and pajamas. The street serves as an extension of the workplace as well. Hair stylists sit their customers on chairs outside their salons to cut their hair, and there are food stalls on every street corner piled high with delicious steamed buns filled with meat, vegetables, or mushrooms.

However, it is not only the sidewalk that is crowded. Despite the extensive metro system – Shanghai has the third longest network in the world – the traffic in the city is terrible. During rush hour, it can take two hours to drive a 30-minute route. In general, drivers do not like to follow the rules of the road, and they regularly ignore speed limits and traffic lights. This makes crossing the road extremely hazardous for pedestrians, whose safety is not guaranteed even when the green light is showing. In China, road accidents are the major cause of death for people between the ages of 15 and 45, with an estimated 600 traffic deaths per day.

But as far as crime is concerned, Shanghai is a relatively safe city. You rarely hear of crimes being committed, although pickpockets are known to operate in crowded areas and tourists are sometimes the target for scams. The most common of these consist of unofficial taxi drivers overcharging passengers for the ride to their hotel from the airport, or bar owners getting an accomplice to bring an unsuspecting tourist to their bar only to present him with a terribly high check when he tries to leave. In general, however, the Chinese are very friendly to foreigners and they treat them with a lot of respect. Nonnative residents usually become good friends with their Chinese neighbors, once they have gotten used to each other.

The city of Shanghai offers a fusion of East and West; old and new. Visitors staying at the brand new five-star Ritz Carlton Hotel can explore the ancient Buddhist temples when they go sightseeing. Passengers travel on the Shanghai Meglev, the fastest train in the world, while messengers transport impossible loads on their bicycles. Sometimes, the contrasts can be exhausting, but one thing is certain: Shanghai is a city where nobody ever feels bored.

Mad Men: fact or fiction in the world of advertising today?

Many people have been introduced to the world of advertising through the American drama series Mad Men, which follows the lives of people working for an important advertising agency on Madison Avenue in New York in the 1960s (hence the name Mad Men). However, the advertising industry has progressed and developed in many ways since then. Here are some examples of how things are different today.

1 _____
Sterling, Cooper, Draper, Pryce is the fictional name of Mad Men's advertising agency and the action revolves around its creative director, Don Draper. All of the agency's work is heavily dependent upon Draper's creative talent and he is constantly called upon to save the day. However, his ability to instantly solve advertising problems single-handedly does not reflect what happens these days. In fact, advertising agencies are made up of different teams that work together and most projects are part of one massive and coordinated campaign. The fate of a real-life campaign rarely lies in the hands of one individual.

2 _____
Mad Men is well-known for its improvised "pitches" (presentations to potential clients) that seem to come out of nowhere. Often it is Don Draper himself who suddenly manages to effortlessly transform a vague idea he has had into advertising gold. This portrayal gives the impression that the most successful approach for pitching a new idea to a potential client is to put off the work for as long as possible. This could not be further from the truth, however, and in real life it takes a lot of hard work and creative genius to make a successful pitch.

3 _____
The atmosphere at Sterling, Cooper, Draper, Pryce is one where anything goes. From long lunches to midday naps in the office, it seems as if there is never anything to be done. In the real world, an agency's workload can vary from one extreme to another depending on the client's demands and the corresponding deadlines. One week, the team may have more time to play while the next they have no time to sleep. This is the nature of the job and a great deal of work goes into every single project, even though there are times when the employees are able to take a break.

In Mad Men, the female characters have been carefully researched so that they coincide with the views of American society at the time. In the 1960s, few women went on to further their education, and those who did often became secretaries or nurses. This situation is reflected at the agency, where sexism is rife and all but one of the executives is male. The exception, Peggy Olson, is regarded as an oddball by her colleagues. Fortunately, the situation these days has greatly improved regarding sexism in the workplace. However, still only a tiny percentage of today's creative directors are women.

Mad Men is one of the most popular period drama series ever shown on American television. It has been widely praised for its historical authenticity, visual style, costume design, acting, writing, and directing and it has won many awards.

Unknown inventors

For most of us, the word “inventor” makes us think of names like Alexander Graham Bell or Guglielmo Marconi, the men behind the telephone and the radio. But what about the people whose inventions we use so often that we forget someone had to think them up in the first place? Read on to find out about five of the unknown inventors of our times.

A An American woman named Margaret Knight was working in a paper bag factory when she noticed how difficult it was to put things into the bags. So, she decided to invent a machine that folded and glued paper to make a flat-bottomed bag. She made a lot of sketches of her machine, but before she could actually make it, another employee named Charles Annan stole her idea. Knight took Annan to court and eventually won the case. In 1858, Knight set up her own paper bag company and received large sums of royalties for her invention when other companies made her bags under license.

B In 1910, a Russian-born candy manufacturer named Sam Born emigrated to the US and set up a business there. One day, when he was wondering how to make the candy-making process more efficient, he thought up an idea for a new machine. It was called the Born Sucker Machine and its job was to quickly and mechanically insert the sticks into lollipops. The new machine helped make the candy and Sam’s company into a huge success, and in 1916, he was awarded “the key to San Francisco.” In 1923, he founded the Just Born company, which is still going strong in the US today.

C In 1959, Ernie Frazee, the owner of a successful American engineering company, was at a picnic when he went to fetch the drinks. In those days, drinks were in sealed cans that were opened with a can opener. Unfortunately, Ernie had forgotten to bring the opener. This started him thinking, and one night, when he was having trouble sleeping, he solved the can dilemma. His idea was a new can that could be easily opened with a ring pull. Ernie’s company began manufacturing a system of mass producing these cans and by 1980, he was making over $500 million dollars a year from his invention.

D Once the banks had decided they wanted to install ATMs, the next problem was how to confirm a customer’s identity to allow money to be withdrawn. It was a Scottish man by the name of James Goodfellow who came up with the solution. In 1966, Goodfellow realized he could link a set of numbers, known only to the account owner, to an encoded card. If the two numbers matched, the person would receive their cash. This number became known as a Personal Identification Number or PIN. Goodfellow didn’t get a penny for his idea, but he did receive an award from the Queen of England.

E When take-out cups of coffee became popular, the Solo Cup Company, a leading producer of disposable cups, saw a hole in the market for a new container. Jack Clements was the man they asked to design it. In 1985, Clements designed a new lid for the cup in the shape of a dome. The lid rested comfortably between the mouth and nose when the user took a sip and it also helped prevent spilling. Since then, the Solo Traveler Lid has been adopted by many of America’s coffeehouses and it has helped Clements’ company earn $2 billion of annual income.

CONFUSION AND CONTROVERSY AT THE OSCARS

Every year, movie-goers all over the world eagerly await the annual Academy Awards ceremony, better known as the Oscars. The red carpet is rolled out, the actors are photographed in their elegant gowns and tuxedos, and the winners are announced. And then comes the moment of truth: the acceptance speeches. Some of these are more memorable than others, but none will be remembered more than one that was made at the 45th Academy Awards ceremony of 1973. This is what happened.

The moment had arrived for the announcement of the winner of the Oscar for Best Actor. The award was to be presented by Roger Moore, who was the current James Bond, and Norwegian actress Liv Ullman. The two opened the envelope and announced the name of the winner: Marlon Brando for his role as Vito Corleone in the movie The Godfather. To everyone's surprise, it was not Mr. Brando who came on stage, but a young woman in Native American dress. The woman was a Native American activist named Sacheen Littlefeather.

She proceeded to brush aside Roger Moore when he tried to give her the statuette and made her way toward the microphone. Here she gave a 60-second speech introducing herself, explaining why she was there instead of the famous actor, and apologizing for interrupting the ceremony. The audience – and the presenters – were shocked!

The reason for Mr. Brando's absence was that he was boycotting the ceremony. In previous years, he had become increasingly upset by the treatment of American Indians on television and in movies, where they were always portrayed as savage and evil. He was also very concerned about an ongoing incident on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota. Tired of their corrupt leader, who was backed by the US government, a group of armed Native Americans had taken over the town of Wounded Knee. At the time of the Oscar ceremony, the Native Americans were still holding the town against US officials, including the FBI.

Mr. Brando had written down the reasons for his boycott in a 15-page speech that he had given Ms. Littlefeather to read at the ceremony. The organizers, however, had prohibited her from making this speech, so she had gone ahead and improvised with her own much shorter version, which caused quite a stir. Halfway through, some of the audience started booing and others began to cheer. Yet she continued bravely to the end and then allowed the two presenters to escort her backstage, where she shared Mr. Brando's original speech with the press. The next day it was printed in its entirety in the New York Times.

Ms. Littlefeather received several death threats after her intervention at the Oscar ceremony, but she continued fighting for the cause and still works with the Native American community today. The Wounded Knee incident finished after 73 days and succeeded in making Americans more aware of the injustice suffered by American Indians in their country. And as far as the Oscar ceremony is concerned, it was the last time that an actor was allowed to nominate someone else to accept an award on his or her behalf.

Interviewer Hello, Mr. Bridges?

Applicant Yes, hello. I'm Stephen Bridges.

Interviewer Good morning. My name's Jenny Howarth.

Applicant Nice to meet you, Ms. Howarth.

Interviewer Would you like to get some coffee before we start?

Applicant Oh, no thank you.

Interviewer All right, please come in and take a seat.

Applicant Thank you.

Interviewer You had no trouble finding us this morning, then?

Applicant Yes, it was easy. I took the subway to 42nd Street, and then I walked. It's a beautiful morning.

Interviewer Yes, it is. So you're here for the position of hotel receptionist, is that right?

Applicant Yes, that's right. I saw your ad on the Complete Jobs website and I decided to apply.

Interviewer You know that this is only a temporary position, don't you Mr. Bridges?

Applicant Yes, I do. And that's ideal for me. I'm moving across the country in three months, so it fits in perfectly with my plans.

Interviewer Really? Where are you going to go?

Applicant Well, I just graduated from college with a degree in Modern Languages, and I'm going to graduate school to work on a Master's degree in California in September to study applied linguistics. My cousin lives there so I'm going to stay with him, which I'm really looking forward to. We get along really well and he knows all the best restaurants to visit. He's been living in California for a couple of years now, and I've been to see him a few times ...

Interviewer Yes, well, back to you, Mr. Bridges, have you had any experience working in a hotel reception?

Applicant Yes, I have. Last summer, I spent a month at Fiesta Hotel in Playa del Carmen. My Spanish improved a lot while I was there, and I also learned a lot about customer care. Some of my colleagues were a little bit difficult sometimes, but in general, we worked well as a team.

Interviewer I see. You mentioned Spanish, Mr. Bridges. Which other languages do you speak?

Applicant I speak Spanish, French, and a little Italian. From my research, I believe most of your guests are from South America, is that right?

Interviewer Yes, but we also have some customers from Asia, mainly Japan. Do you think this would cause you any difficulties?

Applicant Not at all, I'm a good communicator, so we would be able to understand each other.

Interviewer Tell me how you would deal with a difficult guest, for example someone who thinks there is a mistake with the bill.

Applicant I don't think I would have much of a problem. I would speak English with them – very slowly if necessary – and I would use a lot of actions to explain what I wanted to say. If there was a problem with a room number or a price, I would write it down for them. I'm sure I'd be able to make myself understood. I'm very friendly and professional, so I'd have no problem making customers happy.

Interviewer OK. Can you tell me a little more about your experience in Playa del Carmen? What were your duties there?

Applicant Well, I was assistant receptionist there, which meant that I had to deal with the guests who were checking into and checking out of the hotel. I didn't have to make phone reservations – the head receptionist dealt with that. I read on your website that you only have one receptionist on the desk at any one time. Is that right?

Interviewer Yes, we're just a small hotel, so you would have to deal with guests in person and on the phone. Would that be a problem for you?

Applicant No, not at all. I mean, I haven't used a reservations program before, but I'm sure I'd pick it up really quickly. I'm very good with computers.

Interviewer Yes, the program is very easy. So, Mr. Bridges. Why do you think I should hire you and not somebody else?

Applicant Well, I think I have the right skills for the job. I'm a very reliable and efficient person, and I've had some experience in the field. I can also use my language skills to communicate with the foreign guests. The position is for a limited amount of time, which suits us both. Basically, I think that I'm perfect for the job and the job is perfect for me.

Interviewer That's fine, Mr. Bridges. One last question: When can you start?

1 B))

Host On today's program we're going to talk about superstitions. Elena, where do superstitions come from?

Elena Well, the definition of a superstition is "an irrational belief" and we have to go back hundreds of years to find an explanation of their existence. Sometimes the reason behind a superstition is even more bizarre than the superstition it tries to explain. Take the case of the black cat for example. Most people know that it's supposed to be a sign of bad luck if a black cat walks in front of you, but they probably can't tell you why. Well, the reason is that in the Middle Ages, black cats became associated with witches and they were said to possess evil spirits, so obviously people thought that if a black cat crossed your path that this was not very good news at all.

Host So the black cat superstition has been with us for a long time?

Elena Yes, but not as long as the idea that we shouldn't walk under ladders.

Apart from the practical reasons for not doing this – obviously somebody might drop some paint on your head while you are walking underneath – there is a more mysterious explanation that goes right back to ancient Egypt. The shape of a triangle was sacred to the Egyptians and it was considered very bad luck to, as it were, break the "power" of this shape. People believed that if you walked under a ladder, the power of the triangle would break and you would lose your protection against bad luck.

Host Are there any superstitions about good luck?

Elena Yes, there are. You know how people often touch wood or knock on wood when they're talking about something they hope will or won't happen in the future?

Host Yes, in fact I often do it myself.

Elena Well, in the Middle Ages people used to knock on trees to call the good spirits to protect them against misfortune. So that's where that superstition comes from.

Host We have time for one more.

Elena Well, in fact I'd say that the most common superstition concerning good luck is the habit we have of saying "Bless you" when someone sneezes. Again, this dates back to the Middle Ages when the Great Plague – which was a terrible infectious illness – was sweeping through Europe. Most people who caught the plague died and one of the first symptoms was sneezing. When sufferers began sneezing violently, it was considered a sign that they might be going to die and so the Pope passed a law in Rome requiring people to bless the person who was sneezing.

Host I never knew that. Elena, thank you so much for coming on the show. Coming up next time we have ...

Speaker 1 Last summer, I was sitting in my yard enjoying the sun, when I heard my next door neighbor suddenly cry out. Mrs. Thomas is 93 years old and she lives alone, so I raced over to her house to see what was wrong. The kitchen door was open, so I went in and found her on her knees with her head resting on the table. She'd fallen and cut her head and there was blood everywhere. I grabbed a towel, folded it up, and pressed it onto the wound to stop the bleeding. Then I called an ambulance. She had to have stitches when she got to the hospital and they kept her in the hospital that night for observation, but she went home the next day.

Speaker 2 The only time I've ever had to use first aid was on a skiing trip to Canada. I'd gone with a few friends, and we were having a great time until disaster struck. One of my more adventurous friends was skiing down one of those slopes that is really only for experts and he suddenly lost control and crashed into a tree. By the time we reached him, he was in a lot of pain and his leg was at a really strange angle. The only thing we could do was to put snow around his leg to stop the pain and call an ambulance to take him to the hospital for an x-ray. In fact, his leg was broken in three places.

Speaker 3 I had a bit of a scare once when I was out with a friend walking our dogs. My friend, Rosie, suddenly fell and hit her head on the ground. She lost consciousness almost immediately. We were in the middle of nowhere, and I knew the emergency responders would take a long time to find us. Anyway, after calling 911, I lay Rosie on her side to make sure she was able to breathe. Then I lay down next to her and put our coats over us to keep us warm. When the paramedics arrived, they took Rosie straight to the hospital. She was fine in the end, but I found the whole thing really scary.

Speaker 4 A few years ago I remember I was playing soccer in the park with some friends and I suddenly had a terrible nosebleed. The blood was just pouring from my nose. I tried stuffing my nose with tissues, but it didn't make any difference. One of my friends told me to press ice on my face, but of course, we didn't have any ice there. Then another friend told me to pinch the soft part of my nose just under the bridge and eventually it would stop. I didn't really believe him, but I tried it and it worked!

Speaker 5 My friends and I were having a barbecue at my house when it happened. My friend Diane suddenly started coughing and excused herself from the table. Her boyfriend, Martin, went after her and we didn't think anything more of it until we heard Martin shouting for help because Diane couldn't breathe. By this time, she was turning blue, and she was clutching at her throat. I told Martin to call an ambulance, and then I hit Diane hard on the back several times. Suddenly an enormous piece of meat shot out of her mouth, and she could breathe again. We were all really shocked when it was over, especially Diane.

Host Hello, and welcome to the program. Today, we're talking about old age and we've asked our listeners to send in their questions. As usual, we have our expert, Laura, here in the studio with me to answer those questions. Hello, Laura.

Laura Good morning.

Host Are you ready for the first question, Laura?

Laura Yes, Bob.

Host OK then. It's from Maggie in Nashville. Maggie says: why are old people always so miserable?

Laura Well, I'm glad Maggie asked that question, Bob. The elderly have a terrible reputation for being miserable, but we've found out that it isn't actually true. According to our research, older people tend to be happier than young people. This is because they don't have so many things to worry about. Their children have left home and so they can enjoy the freedom this brings with it. So, Maggie, just to set the record straight, old people aren't miserable!

Host Thanks for clearing that up for us, Laura. Onto the next question – it's from John in New Haven. John asks: Is there a typical age when people start getting sick?

Laura That's an interesting one. Many people think that people are programmed to get sick when they get old because of something in their genes, but this isn't true. People get sick if they have an unhealthy lifestyle. If you've taken care of yourself over the years, exercising enough and eating the right food for example, then chances are that you'll be healthy in your old age. So, no John, there isn't a typical age when you start getting sick. It depends, really, on how well you cared for yourself when you were younger.

Host OK. Here's another question for you, Laura. This one is from Heather in New Orleans. She says: Old age must be really boring. People have been working hard all their lives and then suddenly they're expected to sit back and do nothing. How do they cope?

Laura That's another good question, Bob. And now that people are living longer, retirement can last for 30 years or more. But there are plenty of things you can do to fill up your time. You can do part-time work or volunteer work – you can even start a completely different career if you want to. And then, of course, there might be grandchildren to lend a hand with. So, Heather, old age doesn't have to be boring – in fact, some elderly people find that they are almost as busy when they retire as they were when they were working full-time!

Host I hope that answers your question, Heather. Let's look at another one. Richard from Portland is concerned about the issue of overpopulation. He asks: Will there be enough resources on the planet if everybody lives until they are 100?

Laura First of all, Richard, it isn't "everybody" who lives until they're 100; it's only people in the developed world. And the elderly in the developed world are a relatively small percentage of the global population. The increase in population is caused by the high birth rate in developing countries. And, sadly, many of these children never reach old age. So the question of having enough resources relates more to the population explosion in those countries, really, and not on the longer life expectancy in the West.

Host Alright. Now we have time for one more question. Jessie from Dallas asks: Do the elderly have a problem with loneliness?

Laura The thing you have to bear in mind here is that a lot of people today are living longer. This means that there will be a whole group of people just like you when you get old.

The important thing is for you to accept your age, and other people will accept you. There really is no reason to be lonely.

Host And that's very good news for all of us. Laura, thank you for joining us today.

Laura My pleasure.

Interviewer Debbie, can you tell us about an exciting trip you've taken?

Debbie Sure. This happened a long time ago when I was working in Paris. I had a friend who was living in Palau at the time and I decided I'd like to go and visit him. Do you know where Palau is?

Interviewer Um, no. Sorry, I don't. Where is it?

Debbie Well, it's actually the Republic of Palau and it's made up of about 250 islands in the western part of the Pacific Ocean. It's about 600 miles east of the Philippines, if that helps.

Interviewer Ah, OK. I know where that is. So how did you get there?

Debbie Well, that was a problem. I went to a travel agent in Paris and the woman I spoke to told me that the trip wasn't going to be easy. First, I would have to fly to Hong Kong, then to Manila in the Philippines, and from there on to Palau.

Interviewer So, what was the problem?

Debbie Well, this was before the age of flight reservation systems. The travel agent could sell me the ticket for the Paris-Hong Kong flight, but she couldn't book any of the other flights because she had no contact with the airlines.

Interviewer So, what did you do?

Debbie I bought the ticket for Hong Kong and then the travel agent gave me the address of the airline that would take me on to Manila. The idea was that I'd fly to Hong Kong, find the offices of the airline, buy my ticket to Manila, and ask about the flights to Palau.

Interviewer Wow! What an adventure! So, is that what you did?

Debbie Yes. I didn't think anything of it at the time, you know, I was young, and it was the kind of thing that people did in the past. If you wanted to go somewhere a little bit different, you had to find your own way there.

Interviewer What happened when you got to Hong Kong?

Debbie It didn't take me long to find the offices of the airline, because they were in the airport. When they opened, I bought my ticket to Manila and asked them about the flight to Palau. And that was when the fun started.

Interviewer What do you mean?

Debbie Well, they told me that the flight from Manila to Palau only stopped in Manila to pick up cargo. The plane wasn't authorized to pick up passengers.

Interviewer Oh. That wasn't good news.

Debbie No, it wasn't. Apparently, passengers could get on the plane at all of the other stops except in Manila. I have no idea why.

Interviewer So what did you do?

Debbie Well, they said that the only thing I could do was to fly to Manila, find the plane and talk to the pilot. If the pilot agreed to take me, then I could fly to Palau.

Interviewer Don't tell me that's what you did!

Debbie Well, actually, it is. I took my flight to Manila and hung around for a while waiting for the plane to Palau. When it came in, I asked the flight attendant if I could speak to the pilot. It was a tiny plane, and there were only about 13 passengers on it, but they had their very own flight attendant.

Interviewer And what did she say?

Debbie Actually, she seemed pretty excited about me speaking English. I found out why when she introduced me to the pilot – he was Australian! He was amused by my adventure and agreed immediately to take me on to Palau.

Interviewer You were so lucky!

Debbie Yes, I know. But the best thing was that my friend was at the airport to meet me when I landed. I hadn't told him when I'd be getting there – nobody had a cell phone then either – but he'd just dropped by on his way home from work to see if I was there.

Interviewer That's amazing!

Debbie Absolutely. I don't think I'll ever forget that trip.

Interviewer I'm not surprised!

Speaker 1 I only ever have time to read when I'm on vacation, but it's something that I really look forward to. I always make a point of picking up two or three of the latest best sellers from my local book store. When I'm away, I take my book with me to the beach or down to the pool, and then I spend all day lying in the sun, reading. What better way to relax and completely disconnect from life back home?

Speaker 2 I spend a lot of time reading when I'm commuting to and from my job. The trip takes about an hour and a half each way, first on the train and then on the subway. I usually manage to get a seat on the train because it's one of the first stops. As soon as I sit down, I take out my e-reader, and fall into the latest novel I'm reading. I'm a big fan of historical novels, and I get through at least one book a week.

Speaker 3 I'm studying civil engineering in college, so I have to do a lot of reading, though none of it is for pleasure. At the start of the semester, they gave us a booklist as long as my arm, but I haven't read all the books on it yet. Apart from academic books, I read a lot on the Internet. There are a lot of web pages related to my studies, some of them better than others. I do most of my reading in my room, although I sometimes go to the library.

Speaker 4 This may sound strange, but I do most of my reading when I'm at the gym! Actually, for me it's more of a case of listening than reading because I always take an audio book with me. I download the book onto my MP3 player so that I can listen to it while I'm on a spin bike. I do a workout that is 50 minutes to an hour long, so my audio book helps me pass the time. I'm really into crime fiction, so I usually listen to detective stories.

Speaker 5 I used to read a lot, but now I can't, because I have two small children who take up all my time. The only reading I do these days are children's stories. My sons are three and five, and neither of them will go to sleep without their bedtime story. Every night, it's the same routine – bath, dinner, story – the only thing that changes is whose bed we lie on! Their favorite is The Hungry Caterpillar, but I like the Doctor Seuss stories.

And our next story takes us to Australia, where an extreme sports enthusiast had a lucky escape today. Thirty-five-year-old Ewa Wisnierska from Germany was preparing for the World Paragliding Championships when she saw a massive thunderstorm coming toward her. The storm appeared out of nowhere while she was paragliding over Manilla, in New South Wales, Australia. She tried to avoid it, but, because paragliders have no engine, she could not go fast enough to get away from it. When the storm caught up with her, it lifted her up into the air. She told an Australian radio station that the strong winds blew her up in the air "like a leaf from a tree."

The storm took just under 15 minutes to carry the paraglider from a height of 2,460 feet to an estimated height of 6 miles. During the ascent, the temperature dropped to around minus 58 degrees Fahrenheit and

Ms. Wisnierska witnessed hailstones the size of oranges. Here's how Ewa describes her experience: "I was shaking all the time. The last thing I remember it was dark. I could hear lightning all around me." She was sucked up so high that eventually she lost consciousness, but her paraglider continued flying. The whole ordeal was recorded by the GPS system and radio that was attached to her equipment.

Luckily for Ms. Wisnierska, she was only unconscious for about half an hour. When she came to, she had descended to around 4 miles and she was covered in ice. She managed to take control of her paraglider and succeeded in descending by herself. She told reporters later that she felt like an astronaut as she was returning to the ground. "I could see the Earth coming, like Apollo 13." She eventually landed about 200 feet from the site where she had taken off. She had ice in her flying suit and frostbite on her face from the extremely low temperatures she had experienced. As soon as she reached the ground, she was taken to the hospital for observation, but she was released an hour later.

The competition organizers stressed how lucky Ms. Wisnierska had been to regain consciousness while she was up in the air. The body of another Chinese paraglider was found later in the day, about 260 feet from where he had taken off. Forty-two-year-old He Zhongpin from China had been caught up in the same storm as the German woman, but he had not survived the ordeal. Apparently, he had died from extreme cold and a lack of oxygen.

Host And I'd like to welcome Andy Evans, the Director of Extreme Sports United to the program today. Andy, your specialty is bungee jumping, isn't it?

Andy Yes, it is.

Host Can you tell us something about bungee jumping? Whose idea was it?

Andy Well, bungee jumping has been around for centuries, but it wasn't discovered in the West until relatively recently. It originated on the South Pacific island of Vanuatu, where young men known as "land divers" used to perform the ritual of jumping from tall wooden platforms with vines tied to their ankles.

Host And when did "land diving" actually become a sport?

Andy Well, the first modern bungee jump happened about 20 years later in Bristol in the UK. A man named Chris Baker used a kind of elastic rope to make a bungee – that's the name of the rope – and four members of the Dangerous Sports Club made a jump from the Clifton Suspension Bridge on April 1, 1979. They were arrested almost immediately afterward, but people continued jumping off bridges, especially in the US. For example, people did bungee jumps from the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco. In fact, some of these jumps were sponsored by American TV and so this brought the concept of bungee jumping to the public eye and then, of course, a lot of people wanted to try it themselves.

Host How dangerous is bungee jumping? I mean, have people been killed while they were bungee jumping?

Andy Actually, there have been relatively few fatalities considering the number of successful jumps that have taken place. By far the most important thing is to make sure the bungee is the right length. The most common cause of death is using a bungee that is too long, but in most cases the calculations and fittings are double-checked before each jump.

Host How does it actually feel doing a bungee jump?

Andy Well, many people say they love the feeling of falling so fast, but personally, the part I really like best is when the bungee reaches its full extent and then you fly upward again. You just can't beat the feeling of flying back up after you've almost hit the ground.

OK, if I can have your attention, please. Good morning, everybody. My name's Sam, I'm a firefighter, and I'm here today to give you some tips on how to prevent house fires. I'll also be telling you the best way of getting out of a fire, if you ever happen to be trapped in one.

Most fires in the home happen while people are sleeping. One of the most important steps you can take to protect your family is to install a smoke alarm on each floor of your house. Once you've got your smoke alarm installed and working, you should make an escape plan with your family to make sure everyone knows how to get out.

Of course, there are other precautions you can take. The most common causes of fatal fires in the home are tobacco and smoking products, so it's best to avoid smoking in the bedroom. It's also important to keep matches and lighters out of reach of children, preferably in a locked cabinet. Never leave food that's cooking unattended, especially hot oil if you're frying.

As well as preventing fires in the home, you also need to know what to do if a fire does break out. If you get trapped in your home by smoke or flames, close all doors, and stuff towels or clothing under the doors to keep smoke out. Cover your nose and mouth with a damp cloth to protect your lungs. If you have to escape through a smoky area, remember that cleaner air is always nearer the floor, so you'll need to crawl out on all fours.

Finally, and very importantly, if a fire breaks out, do not try to rescue pets or possessions. There isn't time to do this – you must get out as soon as possible. Once you have gotten out, do not go back in for any reason. Firefighters have a better chance of rescuing people who are trapped than you do.

OK, any questions?

Daniel So what annoys you about my family?

Ana Are you really sure you want to talk about this?

Daniel Sure, why not? What's the problem? They're not that bad, are they?

Ana No, of course not, but I have a different perspective, don't you think?

Daniel Oh, come on! I'd really like to know what you think.

Ana Well, all right then.

Daniel What about my mom?

Ana Well, I think she's really nice...

Daniel But...

Ana But she drives me crazy when I'm cooking. I mean, if she wants to help, that's great, but I wish she wouldn't keep complaining that my cabinets aren't organized. I'm very happy with my house and the way it looks, so I wish she wouldn't criticize all the time!

Daniel Well, I don't think she's that bad, I mean, I think she just wants to help...

Ana Yes, and I'm grateful for her help, but not for her comments, OK? That's just how I feel, all right?

Daniel OK. OK. What about Dad?

Ana Well, he's not really interested in anyone else, is he? I mean, if he's happy then that's fine, and if he isn't, well, everyone else has to make sure that he's all right.

Daniel I don't think that's very fair. He's not well. And he gets tired quickly and...

Ana You asked me to tell you what I think, so I'm telling you, OK? I just don't think it's right that we all have to go running around after your dad when there are other people to think about. I mean, there are the kids to worry about, too. OK, it's your turn now.

Daniel What?

Ana To tell me about my family.

Daniel Well, after what you said I don't know where to start! Well, really, your mom can be pretty unbearable. In fact, I've been meaning to...

Host ... and continuing our overview of what's on and where this week, we're going to move on to movies. Judith is here to tell us about a documentary that is showing at the independent movie theater next week. Judith?

Judith Yes, Robert. The documentary is called Alive Inside and it was made by Michael Rossalto Bennett, an alternative US filmmaker. The documentary explores the positive effect that music can have on patients suffering from Alzheimer's disease. It follows the progress of a social worker named Dan Cohen and his plan to introduce music in nursing homes in New York where people with Alzheimer's are being taken care of.

Host How interesting. Tell us more.

Judith In the documentary, we see how he visits the nursing homes and meets some of the patients. What he does is to create a personalized playlist for the patients, which they can listen to on an MP3 player or an iPod. He finds out which songs to include by interviewing each patient's family. By creating the playlist, he hopes that the patients will be able to travel back to the time to when they heard the songs and maybe it will even help them remember important events in their past.

Host And does it work?

Judith Well, I'm giving away some of the story here, but yes, yes it does work. Cohen's biggest success story is a man named Henry. Maybe you've seen the clip about Henry on YouTube?

Host No, I haven't. What is it?

Judith Oh, OK. Well, Henry is special because of the astonishing transformation that happens to him when he listens to his playlist for the first time. When we first see him, he is sitting in his chair with his head down and he's barely capable of answering questions, except with a monosyllabic "yes" or "no." But when he's given his headphones, he turns into a completely different person. His eyes open wide, his face lights up, and he starts moving to the music. He can even answer questions about the song he's listening to. It's actually very emotional watching his reaction, which is probably why millions of people have seen that video clip I mentioned.

Host It sounds like an amazing story, Judith. But do the playlists work for everybody?

Judith They seem to work for most people, yes. And they have had a much wider effect than helping only individuals. At first, Cohen was worried that the iPods might isolate the patients as each one would be listening to his or her own set. But, in fact, the playlists are encouraging them to socialize. The staff members in all four of the nursing homes he worked with in New York reported that the music was helping the residents to talk to each other more. The patients would ask each other questions about the music, and in some cases, they wanted to share the different songs.

Host What effect has Cohen's work had on other nursing homes across the country?

Judith It's too early to say what will happen in nursing homes across the country, but in New York, there have definitely been some changes. One of the greatest obstacles to the plan is the cost. MP3 players aren't cheap, and providing one for every patient in each nursing home would just be too expensive. But Cohen is trying to get around this problem by asking people to donate any old MP3 players or iPods that they may have lying at home at the back of a drawer.

Host Well, this sounds like a really worthwhile project, Judith. But what about the film? Would you recommend it?

Judith Yes, definitely – especially if someone in your family suffers from Alzheimer's. You'll find it a great comfort.

Host Thanks, Judith, for your recommendation. And just to remind you of the name of that documentary, it's Alive Inside, and it's showing at the independent movie theater from Monday to Saturday next week. And now it's time to look at what's on at the theater...

Host Hello, and welcome to the program. Now, we all know that the amount of sleep you get each night can affect your work and your ability to interact with others. Health specialists say that the amount of sleep the average person needs is between seven and nine hours per night. Some new research suggests that diet plays an important role in whether we get a good night of sleep or not. Dietician Richard Vickers is here with us in the studio to tell us more. Good morning, Richard, and welcome to the program.

Richard Hello, Holly.

Host So, Richard, we all know that coffee tends to keep us awake at night. What else should we avoid at dinner time?

Richard Well, actually, Holly, it isn't only coffee that can disturb sleep; it is any food or beverage that contains caffeine, for example chocolate, or tea, or many soft drinks. Of course, caffeine doesn't affect everybody in the same way, but if you are sensitive to it, you should avoid it in the afternoon and in the evening. That way, it won't keep you awake at night.

Host Is there anything else that can potentially stop us sleeping?

Richard Yes, there is. Your sleep can be disturbed if your dinner has a high fat content. The body takes a long time to digest fat, which can make you feel very uncomfortable when you go to bed. People who have extra butter on their bread or heavy cream with their dessert often complain of heartburn or indigestion when they go to bed.

Host That makes sense. So, does it make a difference what time you have dinner compared to the time you go to bed?

Richard Yes, it does. People who suffer from heartburn or indigestion should avoid eating late at all costs. Lying down with a full stomach makes it much more difficult for the body to digest food, causing discomfort and sometimes pain. In fact, eating late can affect all kinds of people, so, in general, I wouldn't recommend it. The same can be said of the quantity you have. Heavy meals should be consumed at lunch time, and you should aim to be eating a light snack in the evening. This will fill your stomach so that you aren't hungry when you go to bed, but it won't make you feel so full that you can't sleep.

Host Richard, we've talked about the amount of food we should and shouldn't eat. What about liquids?

Richard Well, for a good night of sleep, you're obviously better off drinking water with your dinner. But you shouldn't drink too much of that, either. Don't drink too much at dinner time or after dinner, or your sleep will be disrupted because you will have to go to the bathroom during the night.

Host OK. So much for what we shouldn't do. Is there anything that will actually help us go to sleep at night?

Richard Yes, there is – milk. Milk contains a special substance that affects the way that certain hormones in the brain work. One of these hormones is serotonin, which helps us fall asleep. This is why members of the older generation often have a hot, milky drink before they go to bed.

Host Is there anything else that can help?

Richard Yes, there's an herb called valerian, which seems to work well. Research has shown that substances in the root of the valerian plant relax the central nervous system and the muscles. You can take it in liquid or tablet form or you can make a tea out of it. People who have used valerian have said that it has helped them fall asleep quicker and it has given them a deep and satisfying rest.

Host It sounds like valerian might be the answer, then. I'm afraid that's all we have time for today, Richard. Thank you so much for joining us.

Richard My pleasure.

Speaker 1 My husband and I had just been food shopping, and we were having an argument about something – how much money we'd spent, or why we'd bought one particular item of food – I don't know. Anyway, the argument continued into the kitchen, and while we were putting all the food away, my husband kept on banging his hand on the table every time he made a point, but he didn't realize that, without thinking about it, he had picked up one of those little plastic yogurt cups. Suddenly, he hit the table and there was yogurt everywhere – on the table, on the floor, on the ceiling, on the walls ... and on him. We both just burst out laughing ... and that was the end of the argument.

Speaker 2 I had an argument with my dad once over a pair of sneakers. We were in the mall when I saw a really nice pair of DC sneakers in a store window. I pointed them out to my dad, but he'd never heard of the brand DC, and so he said that they must've been made by another designer brand called Dolce and Gabbana – DG. No matter how hard I tried, I couldn't convince him that the sneakers were DC and not DG. In the end, he said he'd buy them for me if I was right. So we went into the store to ask about the sneakers.

The salesperson said, "You mean the DC ones?" proving that I had been right all along. You should have seen my dad's face!

Speaker 3 I was with my girlfriend one night and we'd decided to go to a fast food restaurant to get some burgers to go. Anyway, we started arguing about something in the car on the way – I don't know what started it, but I remember getting pretty angry. The argument continued while we parked, while we were standing in line, while we were ordering, while we were paying, and while we were going home. We were concentrating so much on the argument that we didn't realize that we hadn't picked up the food. We were still arguing in the car, when suddenly my girlfriend said, "Where are the hamburgers?" Then, of course, we had to drive back to the restaurant to get the food!

Speaker 4 This happened when I was little. I was in the kitchen with my sister when my parents started having an argument. My dad was starting to shout when my older brother came in – he must've been about 16 at the time, but he was already taller than my dad. My brother tried to get my dad to calm down, but my dad wasn't listening. In the end, my brother said to him, "OK. You're going to your room." He picked him up, put him over his shoulder, and started taking him upstairs. This broke the tension immediately, and everyone started laughing – including my dad. Honestly, if you could have seen him, holding onto the stair rail, trying to stop my brother from getting him upstairs! It's one of the funniest things I've ever seen!

Speaker 5 This happened a couple of years ago while I was at work – I work at one of those helpline call centers where people call if they have a problem with their Internet connections. Well, anyway, this woman called and she was absolutely furious because she couldn't get her Internet to work. She was so angry, that she was just screaming into the phone at me. Suddenly, there was a break in the conversation, and I said to her, "So, what's the weather like up there where you live?" I don't know what came over me, but those were the words that came out of my mouth. And it worked! The woman was so shocked that she stopped shouting and answered my question. After that, we were able to have a reasonably civil conversation, and I managed to solve her problem for her.

Host Hello and welcome to the program. Today, we're trying to answer the question: What makes a good actor? Our next guest is drama teacher Nicholas Whitby. He's going to tell us a little bit about method acting. Hello Nicholas, and welcome to the show.

Nicholas Hello, Lily.

Host So, Nicholas, what exactly is method acting?

Nicholas Well, method acting is the technique that actors use to create in themselves the thoughts and feelings of their characters. Different actors use different techniques to do this, but the original technique involves doing a series of sense memory exercises.

Host Sense memory? What's that?

Nicholas Well, a memory is a situation that you have a recollection of, right? Well a sense memory is the recollection of the sensations you experienced during that situation. Method actors use this sense memory to help them recreate a particular emotion in front of the camera. They have to do exercises to make this work effectively.

Host What kind of exercises?

Nicholas Well, what most of them do is to focus on the particular situation in the past until the sensations they experienced come back to them. They do this in sessions of 15 minutes or so, until they can reproduce their feelings automatically. For example, if a movie is set in the North Pole, the actor needs to show that he is really cold. So he does his sense memory exercise to help him remember a time when he experienced intense cold. Then he can convince the audience that he is really cold.

Host Do all actors do these sense memory exercises?

Nicholas No, they don't, Lily. Method acting can mean the difference between an Oscar-winning actor and an ordinary actor. Going back to our scene in the North Pole, an ordinary actor would indicate the cold by shivering, wrapping his arms around himself and blowing into his freezing hands. He wouldn't actually be feeling the cold, which would mean that the audience probably wouldn't feel it either.

Host Talking of Oscar winners, Nicholas, tell us about some of the best method actors.

Nicholas Well, let's look at the men first. One actor who goes even further than the use of sense memory is three-time Oscar winner Daniel Day-Lewis. Day-Lewis is known for immersing himself in every role he plays. In My Left Foot, he played the severely disabled Irish writer, Christy Brown. During filming, the crew had to feed him in his wheelchair, and he learned to put a record onto a record player with his foot. A couple of years later, he spent several months living in the wild in preparation for another movie, Last of the Mohicans. And in 2012's Lincoln, he walked and talked like Abraham Lincoln the whole of the time that the movie was being shot.

Host What about female actors, Nicholas?

Nicholas Probably the best example of a female actor who made a superhuman effort to enter her part is Charlize Theron in the movie Monster. Before Monster came out, we were used to seeing Ms. Theron playing superficial female parts requiring a woman with a pretty face. Which is what made her transformation into the serial killer in Monster so shocking. Ms. Theron put on nearly 30 pounds in order to play the role, and anybody who has seen the movie will tell you, she is one of the scariest murderers who has ever hit the big screen. Not surprisingly, she won the Oscar for Best Actress that year.

Host Yes, I remember that one. And I remember Charlize Theron being terribly convincing. Thank you for joining us, Nicholas, and explaining method acting to us. Next on the program we're going to talk about ...

Speaker 1 This was something that happened to a friend of mine. It was very late, about eleven thirty, and he was walking home from work. While he was going through the park, this guy came up to him and told him to give him all his money, which he did. Then the guy asked him for his cell phone, but my friend refused to give it to him, so the guy hit him really hard and knocked him to the ground, breaking his arm. By the time my friend got to the hospital he was in terrible pain, and later the doctors told him he'd been really lucky. It just shows it's better not to try to be brave if something like that happens to you.

Speaker 2 I don't know why, but I always seem to have my wallet stolen when I'm abroad. I guess it's because I'm speaking English and I probably look like a tourist, or something. The last time, I was in a very touristy street in the center of town, but luckily I wasn't carrying much in my wallet, just a few dollars. I've gotten so used to it now that I always take my personal documents out of my wallet and leave them in the hotel. That way, if I'm robbed, I only lose a little bit of money.

Speaker 3 I did something really stupid once. I was traveling home by train and I was really tired, so I fell asleep. Unfortunately, I left my bag with all my things in it on the floor, and I didn't notice when someone took it. I realized what had happened when I woke up and as soon as the train arrived in the station I went right to the police. Amazingly, the police found my bag, but of course my wallet, my phone, and my MP3 player were all missing. I can't believe I was so stupid!

Speaker 4 My mom was on vacation once with a group of friends. They were walking back to their beach condo when a thief tried to grab one of the women's bags. But she didn't let go and started screaming. The other women started screaming too and all of them started hitting him. He ran away without the bag and the group went into a cafe where the people had seen what had happened and all cheered for them. After that, they decided to get a taxi back to the beach condo.

Speaker 5 I was sitting in a coffee shop once when I saw someone take one of the other customer's bags. The thief was with a friend on a motorcycle. The two of them drove up outside the cafe together and then one of them jumped off and ran inside. He grabbed the first bag he came across and then ran back out of the door again. He jumped onto the back of the motorcycle and the two of them rode off. It all happened so fast that nobody had a chance to react.

Host Hello and welcome to the show. On today's program we're looking at famous media mistakes. Journalist Simon Bennett is here in the studio with me and he's going to tell us about a rather memorable weather forecast. Good morning, Simon.

Simon Hello, Silvia.

Host Simon, tell us what happened.

Simon Well, this happened back in October 1987. The forecaster of that particular weather broadcast was Michael Fish – a familiar face in most British households because he'd been forecasting the weather for over thirty years. During the program, Michael referred to a phone call a woman had made to the BBC. Apparently, the woman had asked if there was going to be a hurricane. Michael laughed and said, "If the lady is watching, don't worry, there isn't going to be a hurricane." And nobody thought anything more about it until later on that night.

Host That's right, there was a terrible storm, wasn't there?

Simon Yes, there was. That night, a huge storm hit southern England. To be absolutely accurate, it wasn't actually a hurricane, because hurricanes have to form in tropical areas to be called by that name. But there certainly was a terrible storm that night with winds of up to 110 miles per hour. These wind speeds are typical of hurricanes, which is why there is some confusion about what to call the storm.

Host So, what kind of damage did it cause?

Simon The storm killed 18 people and many more were injured – mainly by falling trees. And it caused billions of dollars worth of damage. Millions of homes were left without power, because trees had fallen on power lines. Transportation in the southern part of the country was severely disrupted because fallen trees had blocked the roads and railways. In total, about 15 million trees fell down that night and the scene the next morning was complete chaos. It was the worst storm to hit the UK in living memory.

Host What happened to Michael Fish after that?

Simon A lot of people blamed him for all the damage because he hadn't warned them about the storm. Worse still, he had said that there wasn't going to be a storm at all. Since then, he has tried several times to make excuses for his words, but deep down, nobody believes him. Michael Fish has gone down in history as the forecaster who failed to predict a hurricane. In fact, twenty-five years after the event, he appeared in the opening ceremony of the 2012 London Olympic Games giving a repeat performance of his famous broadcast.

Host You can see a video of the original broadcast on YouTube as well, can't you, Simon?

Simon Yes, that's right.

Host And now it's time for our weather broadcast – let's hope we don't make the same mistake as Michael Fish! Simon Bennett, thank you so much for joining us.

Simon My pleasure.

Weatherman Thanks, Sylvia. So a pretty bright start for most of us this morning, temperatures already around the 60-degree mark ...

Host And now it's time for the part of the program when we ask our listeners to give us their opinion about a story that has been in the news recently. And today, we're looking at the story of the New Jersey man who bought a lottery ticket with a pool of five coworkers in November of 2009 and cashed it, but didn't share it. He kept all the money for himself. Just in case you haven't heard, Americo Lopes, a construction worker, bought a Mega Millions lottery ticket to share with his coworkers. When Mr. Lopes discovered the ticket had won a prize, he took it to the lottery office and cashed it for the prize money, which was more than $38.5 million. Mr. Lopes didn't tell anyone he had won the lottery and quit his job claiming he needed foot surgery. Several months later Mr. Lopes told a friend about his winning ticket. When his coworkers discovered he'd won the lottery, they took him to court where the jury decided that Mr. Lopes would have to split his winnings with five coworkers. We want to know what you think about all this. Who do you think should get the prize money— all of the coworkers in the lottery pool or just Mr. Lopes? The number to call is 1-800-555-5362, and the lines have just opened. I'll say that number again for you, it's 1-800-555-5362. And here's our first caller. Andrew from Trenton, what do you think?

Caller 1 Well, I think Mr. Lopes should keep all the money. Maybe he bought a lottery ticket with his own money in addition to getting one for his lottery pool. You never know. Also, there's no law against keeping the information about winning the lottery to yourself. Maybe he's a very private person and he doesn't like sharing information about his life.

Host Thank you for calling, Andrew. And now we have Mara from Boise on the line. Mara, do you agree with Andrew?

Caller 2 No, I don't. Not at all. Even if that man bought the lottery ticket with his own money, he should still share it with his coworkers. They had a deal. If the ticket was worth money, then all the coworkers should have a share. If Mr. Lopes didn't want to share the money, he never should have joined a lottery pool in the first place. Am I shocked that he tried to keep all the money to himself? No, I'm not. Money does terrible things to people!

Host Thanks for that, Mara. And our next caller is ... hold on a moment ... yes, it's Roger from Binghamton. What do you think, Roger?

Caller 3 Well, I was brought up to understand that if I kept an object or money that belonged to other people, I would be stealing. I can't understand why there's so much confusion here. Morally, the man should have told his coworkers about the ticket immediately after he learned it was a winner. The jury was right to make Mr. Lopes share the money with his coworkers. It wasn't his to keep to himself in the first place.

Host Thank you for calling, Roger. And now it's Beth's turn. Beth's from Tucson. Tell us what you think, Beth.

Caller 4 Yes, the last caller said the man had a moral obligation to share the lottery ticket, but in fact, he had a legal obligation to do so, too. The group didn't keep written records of the tickets they bought together. Because of this Mr. Lopes can't prove one way or the other that the winning ticket was his alone. Legally, this casts doubt on Mr. Lopes's claims.

Host Thanks for explaining the legal aspects of the case to us, Beth. And we have time for one more caller. It's Carlos from Long Island. Carlos, what's your opinion?

Caller 5 Well, I have some sympathy for Mr. Lopes, you know. He's the one who actually bought the ticket and when he discovered that it had won a prize, he cashed it. Did anyone in the lottery pool ask if the ticket was a winner? Did they ask Mr. Lopes what the numbers on the tickets were? The point is that the coworkers were just as responsible for knowing the ticket information as Mr. Lopes was.

Host Thank you for calling, Carlos. We'll be back with some more views in a moment, but first it's time for the news ...

Speaker 1 My favorite city is on the East Coast of the United States on the banks of the Potomac River. It's named in honor of the first president of the United States, and it's well known for its many historical monuments such as the Lincoln Memorial, the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, and the Jefferson Memorial. It also has the world's largest museum— The Smithsonian Institution. The best time of year to visit, in my opinion, is in the spring during the National Cherry Blossom Festival. Three thousand cherry trees around the city, a gift from Japan in 1912, are covered in tiny pink flowers. It's quite breathtaking.

Speaker 2 The most beautiful city I've ever visited is on the Pacific coast of Canada. It's surrounded by water on three sides, and has the Coast Mountain Range on the other. There's a large island across from the city where Canadians often go on vacation. It also has the largest urban park in North America, called Stanley Park, which has a zoo, a marine science center, and famous gardens containing native trees. It's known as one of the cities with the highest quality of life in the world.

Speaker 3 My favorite city is the capital of a South American country. It's on the banks of the Rio de la Plata and is famous for being the birthplace of tango. It's one of the world's busiest ports and the residents often refer to themselves as Porteños. The main square is called the Plaza de Mayo, and one of this city's streets, the Avenida 9 de Julio is said to be the widest boulevard in the world. Although it's not in Europe, it actually feels quite European— parts of it remind me of Paris and other parts of Italy. In fact, one of the districts is called Palermo Viejo, like the capital of Sicily.

Speaker 4 I took a gap year between graduating from high school and starting college and I went traveling. I visited a lot of wonderful places, but the one I liked best was a city on the southeast coast of Australia. It's a very cosmopolitan city, full of many different cultures, and it has the best Chinatown that I've ever seen! One of the most fascinating things about it is the architecture: beautiful old buildings from the Victorian era contrast with the latest design in skyscrapers— the difference is striking. It's a fairly big city, with a lot of parks and gardens, and there are some amazing beaches nearby.

Speaker 5 I'm lucky, because my job allows me to spend one month every year working in my favorite big city. It's on the south coast of China, and I think it's amazing. It's pretty crowded, but that makes it even more exciting as far as I'm concerned. It's a real mixture of East and West; on the one hand it's an international financial center, and on the other you can find traditional old markets selling all kinds of different food. There are green parks full of people doing Tai Chi first thing in the morning, and the city has a really modern and efficient tram and metro system, so it's very easy to get around.

Host Hello and welcome to the program. Now most people associate NASA with astronauts and rocket ships. What they don't know is that NASA research extends far beyond space flight and into our daily lives. Our special guest today is freelance science journalist, Hank Webb. He's going to tell us about some of the products invented by NASA that we use every day. Good morning, Hank.

Hank Hi, there.

Host So, Hank, where are you going to start?

Hank Well, I'm going to start with something that has saved lives in many homes all over the world: the smoke detector. In the 1970s, when NASA engineers were designing the first US space station, called Skylab, they realized that the astronauts would need to know if a fire had started or if there were poisonous gases in the air. The engineers teamed up with a company called the Honeywell Corporation and together they invented a special kind of smoke detector. The new model was adjustable. Astronauts could change the level of sensitivity on it so that there was never a false alarm.

Host That's fascinating. What's next?

Hank Well, the next one has changed the lives of people who need glasses. As you know, the two lenses in a pair of glasses used to be made of, well, glass. Glass lenses often broke when the glasses were dropped, so opticians started using plastic instead. Plastic doesn't break, but it does scratch easily, and scratched lenses can damage your sight. NASA solved this problem when they developed a new substance to protect the helmets worn by astronauts. The substance stops the plastic from scratching so easily. Manufacturers of glasses soon started using this new technology in their products, which is why the lenses in today's glasses are less likely to scratch than they were in the past.

Host And that's great news for all of us who wear glasses. We have time for one more, Hank.

Hank Alright. I'll tell you about the ear thermometer, then. This was developed from the infrared technology that NASA uses to measure the temperature of stars. A company called Diatek saw a need to reduce the amount of time nurses spent taking temperatures. Together with NASA, the company invented an infrared sensor that serves as the thermometer. The sensor takes your temperature by measuring the amount of heat produced inside your ear. The ear thermometers used in hospitals can take your temperature in less than two seconds.

Host Yes, and those thermometers are a vast improvement on the ones with mercury inside – I can never seem to read them. Hank Webb, thank you so much for joining us.

Hank My pleasure.

Host Hello and welcome to the program. Now, public speaking can be a harrowing experience at the best of times, but imagine how difficult it must be for an important person with a stammer. This is exactly the problem faced by George VI, King of England from 1936 to 1952. Now we're going to find out a little bit more about the King's condition. Good morning, Sarah.

Sarah Hello.

Host So, Sarah, do we know what caused the King's stammer?

Sarah Well, according to the leading speech therapy expert, Rosemarie Hayhow, the King's stammer developed when he was a child – everybody called him Bertie then, so I will, too. Bertie's problem was a psychological one. His father, George V, was a demanding man who would not tolerate weakness. When he saw that his second son was left-handed, he forced Bertie to write with his right hand. This is something that is often associated with stammering today.

Host Did Bertie have any other problems with his family?

Sarah Yes, with his elder brother, Edward. Edward used to laugh at Bertie when he stammered, which made his problem even worse.

Host Did Bertie ever have to speak in public?

Sarah Not usually, no. But in 1925, his father asked him to give the closing address at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. The speech was broadcast live to the nation, and it was a complete disaster. Bertie stammered out a few words and then the broadcast ended in silence. It was then that he realized he had to get help.

Host Who did he turn to?

Sarah Well, first of all he tried his father's doctors, whose methods were very old-fashioned. They used to make him fill his mouth with marbles and on one occasion, he nearly choked! Fortunately, his wife, Elizabeth, was able to find a different therapist for him. It was an Australian named Lionel Logue, who was actually an actor. Mr. Logue had been working as a speech therapist with soldiers who had lost their ability to speak because of the traumas of war.

Host How did Mr. Logue treat Bertie?

Sarah Well, to start with, Mr. Logue insisted on seeing Bertie in his Harley Street office. And he refused to use Bertie's official title, which was the "Duke of York." Instead, he called him "Bertie." Mr. Logue used techniques that gave Bertie more confidence. He made him sing instead of speaking; he played music to him through headphones while he was reading, so that he couldn't hear himself and become self-conscious; he even got Bertie to swear. After about ten months, the treatment seemed to be working.

Host Which was a good job, wasn't it? Because soon after that, Bertie became King of England.

Sarah That's right, Jeremy. When George V died, Bertie's brother, Edward, became King Edward VIII. But Edward wanted to marry an American woman who was divorced, which he was forbidden from doing as King. In the end, Edward abdicated and Bertie became King George VI. Which meant that he had to start speaking in public again.

Host So, what happened?

Sarah At first, the King avoided making live speeches, but by 1939 he couldn't do this any longer. On September 3rd of that year, Britain declared war on Germany and the King had to deliver the most important speech of his life.

Host So what did he do?

Sarah He asked Mr. Logue to help him. The two men went into a small room with the recording equipment and closed the door. Mr. Logue opened a window and told the King to take off his jacket. Then, he advised the King to forget everybody else and say the speech to him, as a friend.

Host Did it work?

Sarah Yes, it did. The King's delivery was calm, dignified, and measured. And at the end of the broadcast, Mr. Logue finally called him "Your Majesty."
